QUARTERLY REVIEW

Consternation amid Chaos: Optimism for U.S. equity markets waned in 1Q25 as a barrage of trade and fiscal policy headlines unsettled investors. The promise of the new administration's pro-domestic growth platform met the sobering reality that implementing change can be difficult. Market analysts began to doubt the consensus call for gross domestic production growth in 2025, as tariff-induced destabilization and Department of Government Efficiency budget cuts dampened consumer sentiment and business activity. Despite Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell's reassurances about the U.S. economy's health, recession fears percolated on the central bank's decision to lower its growth forecast and raise its inflation outlook through 2027.

Given heightened uncertainty and other contractionary signals (e.g., tepid outlooks from cyclical companies), both the S&P 500® and NASDAQ® indexes entered correction territory during the quarter. In addition, the market stalwarts over the past two years – a group of large technology companies known as the "Magnificent Seven" – hit a snag as profit-taking and concerns over artificial intelligence (AI) spending gained steam. To avoid the volatility of long-term growth equities, investors sought relief in defensive sectors and safe-haven assets, such as U.S. Treasury bonds and cash. The Zevenbergen Genea Fund contended with conservative repositioning and trailed the Russell 3000® Growth Index, with adverse security selection, particularly in consumer discretionary further detracting from returns (see performance highlights on page 3).

PERSPECTIVE

After dusk comes dawn: The adage "price is what you pay, value is what you get" can apply to the stock market as it does to work boots, vacuum cleaners, and cashmere sweaters. For stocks, price can be represented in shorthand ratios or multiples (such as price-to-earnings) which often serve as a better barometer of investor mood than a company's intrinsic value or cash flow trends. Historically high multiples suggested investors were in positive spirits to start 2025, until a "wet blanket" of uncertainty doused bullish sentiment with forecasts of continued economic and political clouds.

ZCI sees two paths ahead: one grounded in stability, the other in fortitude. We choose the latter, guided by the conviction that comfort harbors its own risk – the cost of missing generational equity ownership opportunities. Based on judgement honed over nearly four decades, we encourage investors to view market swings as invitations to capture advantageous pricing in durable businesses run by talented people who strive to make the world more productive, safe, and fulfilling. Unlike price, which buyers incur immediately, value is realized over time. Let patience work in your favor.

Read it carefully before investing.

Mutual fund investing involves risk, including the loss of principal. The Fund invests in securities of foreign companies which involve greater volatility and political, economic and currency risks and differences in accounting methods. Non-diversified funds may hold a significant percentage of their assets in the securities of fewer companies and therefore events affecting those companies have a greater impact on the Fund than on a diversified fund. If the Fund invests in a few sectors they may have increased exposure to price movements of those sectors. Small and medium capitalization companies tend to have limited liquidity and greater price volatility than large capitalization companies.
